This is an applied four-day group relations conference exploring complexities in caring for the emotional and psychological well-being of adults, young people, children and their families within multi-disciplinary and multiagency contexts.

Full details and application form are available on our website:

This conference is for anyone who works directly with adults, young people, children and their families, or who manages or supervises this work, who also wants a better understanding of themselves and of groups and organisations in this work.

It is not a didactic conference where there will be lectures and PowerPoints but rather an experiential one, which offers members the chance to understand more about group processes and how they behave in a variety of group settings.

It is an opportunity to see how the dynamics of differing professional practices impact on authority and the interplay of this with individually held stereotypes, assumptions and beliefs. Members will also become more aware of the tensions in working with clients across multiple agencies and how collaboration can work but also the forces that may work against it both consciously and unconsciously.

To maximise the conference learning for you and other attendees, we ask all members to commit to attending the whole of all four days.

Closing date for applications: Thursday 28 February 2019.
